Dear Northwest Christian School Friends and Family,

Welcoming students back after a break, always brings a smile to my face. I was particularly entertained by the kindergarten student who invested much time and energy this morning in convincing me that she had grown 2 inches over spring break. Well, not a very likely story, it does represent the precocious imaginations, the run deep in our student body.

Today is the first day of the last academic quarter of the 2024-25 school year. As we encourage our students to finish strong on our end, I ask for your support in affirming this message on the home front. Whether your kiddo is an eighth grader preparing to make the seminal leap to high school, an NCS TK student finally making the big transition to kindergarten, or any grade in between; this quarter represents a major transitional milestone in the lives of our young people. Moving up to the next grade is a really big deal!

Finishing strong is an essential life skill, and one that our students are learning right now, here, today. Our NCS teachers and educators are here to support you and your family as we land this school year together.

Craig Mattson
