A Note From the Principal

Greetings, PJA family,

Once again, I take this moment to thank God for his guidance this week. This Friday, the students and the teacher are celebrating Valentine's Day in their classroom. I want to thank all the parents for your support.

- Pastor Reynolds Rodriguez will speak to the students' assembly.
- Graders 4 and 5 are participating in the student assembly.
- Graders 5-8 are preparing for the music festival that will be held at Union Spring Academy on February 26-28
- Next week is our winter recess, a much-needed break for all staff, faculty, and students.

This week, I was not at Parkview Junior Academy; I was in Texas for a four-day meeting, and I have not seen snow. I want to thank all the teachers, staff, Mrs. Sue Hayford, and students for your support. PJA is always grateful to those who support the school in many ways. God richly bless you and your family. Philippians 4:13 "I can do all things through Christ who strengthens me."

Have a great weekend.

Sincerely yours,

Mr. Sathiyaseelan

How to Teach Kids Responsibility: 13 Effective Ways

Responsibility is one of the most powerful gifts we can give our children. It prepares them to think for themselves and make their own decisions. It also teaches them to be caring and compassionate members of society. Kids who learn to embrace responsibility from a young age will understand what it means to make meaningful choices that affect their own lives and the lives of others around them.

So much encompasses the term "responsibility." It's not one single concept – it's a set of principles that you can choose to adopt into your life... It has been defined as:

- Recognizing obligations to others
- Being motivated to fulfill them
- Anticipating consequences
- Exercising ethical agency with relevant skills, values, and motives.

Furthermore, responsibility is foundational to liberty. A free and fair society means you need people who govern themselves wisely and act with integrity. Because of this, personal responsibility is more than just a good habit for your child to have — it's a civic virtue, and one we should all practice.

Teaching your kids to be responsible will empower them. You give them:

- The confidence they need to make decisions, solve real problems, and think for themselves.
- The self-discipline to follow through, keep commitments, and finish what they start.
- Genuine empathy and compassion that help them respect other people's time, property, and feelings.
- The ability to contribute meaningfully to their family and community in ways that really matter.

When we teach children responsibility, we give them a lifelong gift: confidence to manage their life, courage to admit and fix mistakes, and the maturity to serve others. That's how kids grow into adults who value their freedom, honor their commitments, and become trustworthy members of your family and community.
