A Note From the Principal

Greetings PJA family,

It is my honor and privilege to thank our Heavenly Father for His guidance and blessings this week. The weather has been exceptionally pleasant, and the students have enjoyed outdoor physical activities.

The skate night was held on Saturday, March 07, 2026, under the leadership of Mrs. Amber Perrin. It sounds like the team worked well together to organize it. I would like to thank Mrs. Amber Perrin and the Home and School team. I also want to thank everyone who attended and supported the event.

The third quarter is nearly ending, so please remind students to check for missing assignments and submit them.

Upcoming school activities include the Parents' Teacher Conference, the Week of Prayer, the Spring Concert, the Color Run, and the Work Bee.

Once again, thank you very much to everyone for your support of PJA. May God bless you.

Philippians 4:6-7 "Do not be anxious about anything, but in everything by prayer and supplication with thanksgiving let your requests be made known to God. And the peace of God, which surpasses all understanding, will guard your hearts and your minds in Christ Jesus."

Warm Regards,

Mr. Sathiyaseelan

How to Teach Kids Responsibility: 13 Effective Ways

Encourage Empathy and Compassion

Empathy and compassion will go a long way in ensuring your child has moral responsibility. Your child should learn to think beyond their own thoughts and feelings and try to understand others. They should be able to notice when their friend is sad, and beyond that, want to be able to help them.

One of the best ways to teach compassion is through reading. Multiple studies have proven, time and time again, that reading, especially carefully chosen fiction, improves empathy. Literary fiction improves our capacity for understanding the behavior and feelings of others, increasing our empathy toward people who are different from us. This makes sense, since when we read, we put ourselves in the character's shoes. Encourage your child to put down their devices and read. Choose Your Consequence books are good options because the reader's choices will directly impact the narrative of the story.

Educate Your Child on Bias

If you want to teach your kids moral responsibility, help them identify biases, including both their own and others'. Develop their critical thinking skills by asking them questions like:

- Why do you think that person was treated differently?
- Do you think that was fair?
- How could you support a person who is being treated unfairly?

Encourage Acts of Kindness

Kindness is a powerful form of moral responsibility. It's the choice to improve someone else's life, even in small ways.

Some examples of acts of kindness include:

- Helping a friend with their homework
- Making a card for someone who is feeling down or sick
- Sharing treats with a sibling without being asked
- Pulling weeds for a neighbor who isn't well

Set a Good Example as a Parent

Teaching your kids responsibility is as much about what you do as it is what you say. Studies on behavior copying in childhood show that children mimic their parents' behavior, often unconsciously. They copy actions, attitudes, and social behaviors, which means it's so important to set a good example as a parent, from apologizing when you make a mistake to following through on commitments. You are your child's first and most influential teacher.
